TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—Massachusetts was one of the original thirteen states. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 3,852,356, which represents an increase of 485,940, or 14.4 per cent, over the population in 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased 14.9 per cent. The following summary shows the population of Massachusetts from 1790, the first Federal census year, to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase in each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

Counties.—Massachusetts has 14 counties, of which 3 (Barnstable, Dukes, and Nantucket) show decreases in population during the last decade. The same counties also showed decreases in the preceding decade, and 2 of them (Barnstable and Nantucket) in the decade from 1890 to 1900. (See Table 1.) There has been only one change in the territorial boundaries of the counties since 1910, Hyde Park town, in Norfolk County, having been annexed to Suffolk County and made a part of Boston city in 1912.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 8,039 square miles, and the average number of persons to the square mile in 1920 is 479.2 (see Table 1); in 1910 and 1900 the averages were 418.8 and 349, respectively.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." In Massachusetts the primary division of the county is the town or city, and in 1920 these number 316 and 38, respectively. (See

POPULATION—MASSACHUSETTS.

Table 2.) Villages are not incorporated as such in this state.

Cities.—Of the 38 cities in Massachusetts, 26 have a population in 1920 of 25,000 or more. Only 1 town (Brookline) has this amount of population. Boston, the capital of the state and the largest city, has a population of 748,060, while Worcester,

Springfield, New Bedford, Fall River, Lowell, and Cambridge, in the order named, have over 100,000 inhabitants each. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows the population of all cities in Massachusetts having 25,000 inhabitants or more in 1920, together with Brookline town, at each census for which figures are available:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more. Since it is not the practice in Massachusetts, as in practically all the other states, to have municipal incorporations, such as villages, within the limits of the town, and since no town becomes a city until its population is greatly in excess of 2,500, it has been necessary to include as urban not only the population of cities but that of all towns having over 2,500 inhabitants. The result is that the "urban area" in Massachusetts contains some population which in other states would be classified as "rural," but on account of the density of population of the state as a whole, there is no likelihood that the proportion of urban population is materially overstated.

Urban population in Massachusetts being thus defined, the rural element, therefore, consists of the population of towns having less than 2,500 inhabitants.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, the urban and rural population of the state. The classification for each census is based, of course, upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. As the result, the figures for each census covered by the table do not relate exactly to the same urban and rural territory, respectively, as those for the other two censuses, since, through the growth or decline of its population, some territory which was rural at a certain census may have become urban at the next census, or the reverse of this change may have occurred. The proportion of the population of Massachusetts living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 91.5 per cent in 1900 to 92.8 per cent in 1910 and to 94.8 per cent in 1920.
